

Three generations of LaBrie families have worked together to maintain a strong potato industry in Maine.

(And to help preserve the quality of life for everyone in the state)

Thanks in part to potato farming families like the LaBries of St. Agatha, agriculture remains one of the largest industries in the state. For over 100 years, they've helped keep Maine's potato industry strong in a competitive international marketplace. And as stewards of the land, they've also helped preserve the peaceful, rural nature that makes Maine, well, Maine. So when you buy Maine potatoes, you too are helping to preserve Maine's quality of life.

Humble spuds. Huge impact.
